WATERLOO — The Zonta Club of Kitchener-Waterloo honoured two inspiring young women Wednesday night at the club's April meeting.

Ellen Fowler of Waterloo was awarded the Young Women in Public Affairs and Kara Chiki received the Jane M. Klausman Award for Women in Business.

Chiki is a third-year honours business administration student from Welland who maintains an A average with a concentration in international business. She plans to pursue postgraduate degrees in law and has an extensive volunteer background, including the corporate social responsibility board. She is also an active member of a club that raises money and awareness for projects in Africa.

Fowler is a Grade 12 student at Waterloo Collegiate Institute who is highly involved in many student activities. They include being a member of student council, the school newspaper and orchestra, the Federal-Provincial Conference Simulations, Sears Drama Festival, Junior Achievement and as a student leader of the human rights club. Presently she is organizing the school's first mental health awareness campaign. Fowler is also active in the community outside her school, raising money for third world development projects and plans on pursuing a career in international development.
